

The Polish Review
Submission Guidelines and Stylesheet

updated June 2026

I. Submission Guidelines

1. Originality. Only original scholarly work is considered for publication. Submission to The Polish Review requires a statement by the author(s) that neither the manuscript nor any substantially similar version of it is under consideration or has appeared elsewhere. For additional information for authors, please consult the document “Author Responsibilities” at https://www.press.uillinois.edu/journals/ethics_statement.html before submitting your manuscript.

Annotated translations of documents and literary works are also considered for publication. When you submit a translation of a document or a literary work, permission to translate it must accompany the manuscript.

2. Disclosure guidelines on the use of generative AI technology. The Polish Review follows the disclosure guidelines adopted by the University of Illinois Press: “Authors are fully responsible for the content of their manuscript, even those parts produced by an AI tool, and are thus liable for any breach of publication ethics.” Any use of generative AI technology should be acknowledged, documented, and cited properly in articles, review essays, and book reviews. One way to acknowledge the use of AI tools is to include an unnumbered endnote immediately after the main text, for example: “This article has been written with the assistance of ChatGPT, OpenAI, March 7, 2026, <https://chat.openai.com/chat>.” Or, “This book review has been translated with the assistance of ChatGPT, OpenAI, March 7, 2026, <https://chat.openai.com/chat>.”

3. Length. Each article submission should be 7,000 to 9,000 words long, including notes, tables, etc. Information for book reviewers: Book reviews are limited to 1,000–1,200 words, including notes (if any). Review essays are limited to 2,500–3,000 words, including notes (if any). The length of a review essay depends not only on the number of books covered, but also on the depth of the reviewer’s discussion of broader issues – conceptual, theoretical, and/or methodological – that are relevant to the books under review. Quotations from the book under review must include a page number or we will not be able to include the quotations. Please double-check the accuracy of all quoted material.

4. Abstract and keywords. Please include a one-paragraph abstract. The abstract should be no longer than 250 words. It should be a brief summary of the key points of the article. In addition, provide five keywords.

5. Endnotes. Do not use footnotes, a bibliography, or a reference (works cited) list. Instead, put your citations in endnotes. Use computer-generated endnotes only, but make sure that they are numbered using Arabic numerals. For the required format of endnotes, please see the section Endnotes later in this document.

Do not attach endnote numbers to article titles or subheadings or to your name as author. If you wish to include a note of acknowledgment, place it as an unnumbered endnote immediately after the main text, with the following instruction for the compositor: <PLACE THIS UNNUMBERED NOTE on the first page>.

Although The Polish Review converts endnotes to footnotes in the published articles, endnotes are used during the editing process. The use of endnotes by contributors facilitates copyediting and helps avoid formatting errors.

6. Manuscript preparation. Manuscripts should be submitted in Microsoft Word via e-mail attachment. All articles should be prepared for anonymous review. The author's identity should not be revealed either in the main text or in the endnotes. Do not use your name in acknowledgments or running heads. Please write your first and last name on a separate first page. Arrange your manuscript in the following order:

- article title
- abstract
- keywords
- main text
- endnotes

7. Spacing. Double space the entire manuscript, including block quotations and endnotes.

8. Justification. Use left justification (i.e., a justified left margin and a ragged right margin). Turn off the automatic hyphenation feature on your word-processing software.

9. Titles of works. In the main text, titles of works (books, poems, plays, operas, movies, artworks, etc.) should be given in the original language, followed at the first mention by English translations in square brackets, for example: Dom dzienny, dom nocny [House of day, house of night, 1998], with the bracketed title having lower case lettering. Subsequent references will be to the English title and will follow the American standard for capitalization: House of Day, House of Night.

- In endnotes, it is sufficient to give titles of works in the original language only.
- Underline: titles of books, periodicals, newspapers, films, TV and radio programs, paintings, sculptures, operas, plays, and epic poems. Do not use quotation marks for these titles.
- Use quotation marks for titles of articles, book chapters, short stories, poems, songs, TV and radio episodes, and unpublished works (e.g., dissertations).
- Follow the first mention of any book, poem, play, movie, opera, or artwork with a date when it was first published, screened, performed, or exhibited.
- For titles of periodicals and newspapers such as The Polish Review or The New York Times, always include The. This stylesheet overrides The Chicago Manual of Style that allows authors to drop "the" from titles of periodicals and newspapers (e.g., New York Times).

- Information for book reviewers: reviews of books that have been translated into English from Polish and other languages should include the original title in square brackets, following the English title, as part of the bibliographical paragraph at the head of a book review, e.g.:
Olga Tokarczuk, The Lost Soul [Zgubiona dusza], trans. Antonia Lloyd-Jones, with illustrations by Joanna Concejo (New York: Seven Stories Press, 2021), 48 pp. ISBN 978-1-64421-034-5 (hbk).

10. Quotations. Quotations from primary and secondary sources, originally written and/or published in languages other than English, should be given in the English translation in the main text. The original Polish text may be included in endnotes. If an ellipsis is part of the quotation, it should remain unchanged. If, however, you add an ellipsis to indicate missing text, place ellipsis points in square brackets [...]. Use square brackets to indicate all other editorial interpolations.

- Block quotations: Longer prose quotations (material that takes up at least five manuscript lines), all quotations of more than one paragraph, and all poetry quotations longer than two lines should be set as block quotations. Block quotations should be indented half an inch and demarcated by an extra line between your text and the start of the quotation. Add an extra line between the end of the quotation and the restart of your text. In addition, mark the start of each block quotation with <START BLOCK QUOTE> and place <END BLOCK QUOTE> at the end of each block quotation.

11. Photograph, line art, and figure specifications

Artwork and photographs

Digital images must be of sufficient quality for print reproduction. Accepted file formats are JPG, TIF, GIF, or EPS. Resolution must be at least 300 dots per inch (dpi). Artwork and film still files should be in grayscale, not color.

Digital files must not be embedded in the text document. These files should be submitted as separate files, and “callouts” should indicate where illustrative materials are to appear within the text, e.g.: <INSERT FIGURE 1 NEAR HERE>.

Callouts should be placed on a separate line at the end of the paragraph closest to where you would like the image to appear.

- Provide a separate list of captions for all illustrative material.
- Make sure that the images you include are either in the public domain, or that you have secured the copyright holder’s permission to reproduce them. Permission to reproduce the images must accompany the manuscript.
- Provide the text for the photo credit. Examples: Photo: author’s own. Photo: XYZ Gallery, used with permission. Photo: courtesy of Martin Smith.

Graphs, line drawings, and maps

Graphs, line drawings, maps, etc. to be reproduced in articles must be in a form that is suitable for photo reproduction or scanning. Digital images must be of sufficient quality and in black-and-white format. Please submit files in JPG, TIF, GIF, or EPS format at a resolution of 1200 dpi. Do not submit Excel files.

Digital files must not be embedded in the text document. These files should be submitted as separate files, and “callouts” should indicate where illustrative materials are to appear within the text, e.g.: <INSERT FIGURE 1 NEAR HERE> or <INSERT EXAMPLE 1 NEAR HERE>. Callouts should be placed on a separate line at the end of the paragraph closest to where you would like the figure to appear.

Tables

All tables will be reformatted to the house style and therefore must be submitted in an editable electronic form (Microsoft Word). Tables should appear in consecutive order at the end of their respective article or grouped in a separate Word file. “Callouts” should indicate where tables are to appear within the text, e.g.: <INSERT TABLE 1 NEAR HERE>. Callouts should be placed on a separate line at the end of the paragraph closest to where you would like the table to appear.

II. Stylesheet

Punctuation:

1. All punctuation is placed INSIDE quotation marks (inverted commas):
 - a. As Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak wrote, “All historicizing is narrativizing—putting in the form of a story.”
 - b. The short story “Call of the Wild,” while genius, is also quite clipped.
 - c. The question Sartre asks is “what is existence?”
 - d. Exceptions to this rule are colons, semicolons, and dashes:
 1. He makes this remark in his work “No Exit”; this is probably his most existential play.
 2. While at the end of the play the character says, “Hell is other people”—an obvious statement by this time—he does not yet seem to believe it.
2. The Polish Review does not use single ‘scare’ quotes. Use only double “quotation marks.”
3. Use single quotation marks only if something is quoted within a quotation:
 - a. Jack London remarked, “My short story ‘Call of the Wild’ was my proudest moment.”
4. Do NOT use double commas as quotation marks: „Call of the Wild”
5. Do NOT use double arrows as quotation marks: <<Call of the Wild>>
6. Use the SERIAL or OXFORD comma before “and” and “or”: I like apples, oranges, and pears. I don't use apples, peaches, or pears in my pies. The only exception occurs when you quote a source that does not use serial commas.

Spelling:

The Polish Review uses American standard English. Avoid British English spellings unless directly quoting sources. For example, use:

- neighbor (not: neighbour)
- center (not: centre)
- defense (not: defence)
- organize (not: organize)
- traveled (not: travelled)
- maneuver (not: manoeuvre)

However, there is one major exception:

- theatre (not: theater)

Spelling of frequently used terms:

- antisemitism (not: anti-Semitism), philosemitism (not: philo-Semitism)
- prewar (not: pre-war), postwar (not: post-war), postcommunism (not: post-communism), socioeconomic (not: socio-economic)
- coauthored (not: co-authored), coedited (not: co-edited), nonfiction (not: non-fiction)
- Our preferred forms are: World War I, World War II. We also accept: the First World War, the Second World War. However, WW1 / WW2 and WWI / WWII are not acceptable.

Numbers:

Spell out numbers one to ninety-nine; use digits for 100 and above. Note the following exceptions:

- At the beginning of sentences spell out all numbers: “One hundred years ago....”
- Before percent: 2 percent
- Years and ranges: 1998, 1918-1920
- Decades: 1960s, 1970s
- Centuries: “In the fifteenth century....”
- Money: $50, 70 PLN
- Spell out ROUND numbers: fifteen hundred, six thousand (but 91,000 and 100,000)
- Hyphenate fractions: one-half
- Use digits for chapters in texts: chapter 5

Dating system:

The Polish Review uses the American system for dates: Month Day, Year, e.g., March 3, 2020. Do not use ordinal superscripts (^{th rd}) after days.

Cities:

In general, use the native version of the city name:

- Kraków over Cracow
- Lviv or L'viv over Lwów (if you need to make an important historical distinction, use, for example: “known at the time as ‘Lwów.’”)
- Kyiv (not: Kiev)

However, there are several exceptions, for example:

- Warsaw over Warszawa
- Moscow over Moskva or Moskwa

In endnotes, include only the primary city of publication (do not use, e.g., New York and London).

Gender:

The Polish Review does not use masculine pronouns as universal. Except where descriptively appropriate, please use gender-neutral terms and phrasings. Example: Every scholar in this discipline could be independent, if he or she was willing to make that choice.

Citations:

Ibid.: Like many other English-language scholarly journals, The Polish Review no longer uses ibid. To avoid using ibid., follow these examples:

1. Alice Wiemers, Village Work: Development and Rural Statecraft in Twentieth-Century Ghana (Athens: Ohio University Press, 2021), 34.
2. Wiemers, 45.
3. Todd Cleveland, A History of Tourism in Africa: Exoticization, Exploitation, and Enrichment (Athens: Ohio University Press, 2021), 56.
4. Wiemers, Village Work, 101.
5. Wiemers, 103.
6. Wiemers, 106.
7. Cleveland, History of Tourism in Africa, 58.
8. Cleveland, 95.

“See” and “cf.”: Keep in mind the distinction between “see” and “cf.” Only use “cf.” to mean “compare” or “see, by way of comparison.” “cf.” should only be used in this very specific situation. Do not italicize either term.

1. See Jones, Conflict, 49, for further discussion of this problem.
2. Others disagree with my position here; cf. Fisher and Ury, Getting to Yes, 101-103.

“ff.” and “passim”: Both “ff.” and “passim.” are discouraged. “ff.” (“and the following pages”) should only be used when no final page number can usefully be given. Instead of the singular “f.” the subsequent page number should be given:

- 140-141, NOT 140f.

Similarly, “passim” should only be used if it follows a range of pages within which there are more than three or four precise references:

- 324-332 passim.

Endnotes:

The Polish Review does not use bibliographies. Do not add one. Instead, use endnotes with a complete citation for the first time a work is referenced. An endnote number should be placed at the end of a clause or at the end of a sentence.

For online sources, no dates of access—most recent or any—should be included in the citation.

1. Books

--Single-author books:

e. Alex Smith (retired plumber) in discussion with the author, January 2017.

8. Archival material

Citations of archival material should be structured in consultation with the specific archive; many have preferred methods of being cited. Below are general guidelines that can be flexible. The citation should be clear enough for the reader to find the necessary information. The Polish Review is an English-language journal; as much information as possible should be in English.

¹ Author if available, Specific archival record, date (day, month, year), identifier (box/folder/item number), name of collection, name and location of repository.
